river of bubbling, glowing slime running through it that makes their new Giga-meters register right off the scale!

Called to court for disobeying a court order to stop ghostbusting, Ray, Egon and Peter save the judge from the Scoleri Brothers ghosts. The judge releases them from the court order and the Ghostbusters resume their work. Dana Barrett returns to the Manhattan Museum of Art. Dana does not yet realize that her fellow art restorer, Janosz Poha, is possessed by the powerful spirit that exists within the painting he is repairing. This ghost, Vigo the Carpathian, feeds off people's negative feelings (such as fear, jealousy, Dana Barrett and her little son, Oscar, need the help of the Ghostbusters once more!

Unfortunately, the Ghostbusters no longer exist!

Peter Venkman is a cable TV talk show host. Egon Spengler is continuing his research for a private corporation. Ray Stantz and Winston Zeddemore earn a living by entertaining at children's parties.

Dana manages to track down Egon, who agrees to investigate the problem. During their investigation, Egon, Ray and Peter discover a long-abandoned subway station that has a anger and cruelty).

Ray and Egon experiment with the slime sample from the subway tunnel. They discover that it reacts to emotions, becoming agitated when it feels a person's anger and mellow when it feels someone's happiness. Also, when painted or sprayed on an object, the ooze can make the object come to life!

On New Year's Eve, Ray, Egon and Winston return to the abandoned subway station, discovering that the massive flow of angry slime is headed toward the museum. They realize Vigo is the focus of the psychic problems.

Meanwhile, things go completely haywire! The R.M.S. Titanic finally docks in New York...over 50 years late!

A well dressed woman is shocked when she is bitten — not by a dog — but by her own mink coat!

Arriving at the now slime-covered museum, the Ghostbusters realize they need help from a very special friend: the Statue of Liberty!

Near midnight, Vigo is almost free of the painting. Just then, the statue's hand smashes through the skylight with its torch! Ghostbusters come raining down. They hose down Janosz with slime, then turn their attention to Vigo, who grabs Ray! The Ghostbusters spray him, hoping the slime won't harm Ray. (It doesn't — Ray's fine!) The paint on the canvas melts, taking Vigo with it!

The mayor wants the Statue of Liberty returned to its rightful place. The Ghostbusters say they'll do the job — if the mayor pays their bill! The mayor agrees, and a few days later, the statue is restored to Liberty Island, and everyone is happy.

The Ghostbusters proceed to Liberty Island, enter the statue and then spray its interior, from top to bottom, with slime. Meanwhile, Dana and Oscar are trapped in the museum with Janosz and the evil Vigo, who plans to take over the world at midnight!

The Statue of Liberty, which the slime has made animate, trots up Broadway.

Peter Venkman (Bill Murray)

Bill Murray plays the laid-back Dr. Peter Venkman. Anything but laid-back himself, Bill Murray has played a wide range of characters, including roles in Little Shop of Horrors and The Razor's Edge. He first became famous when he joined Saturday Night Live, creating an army of weird characters including Nick the Lounge Lizard and Todd the Nerd. His other credits include Meatballs, Stripes, Caddyshack, Where the Buffalo Roam, Mr. Mike's Mondo Video, and, of course, Ghostbusters.

Ray Stantz (Dan Aykroyd)

Dan Aykroyd co-wrote the first Ghostbusters and in this sequel returns as both star and co-writer! Aykroyd also co-wrote (and starred in) Trading Places and The Blues Brothers. He also had leads in 1941, Twilight Zone—The Movie, Neighbors, Doctor Detroit, Dragnet, The Great Outdoors, and My Stepmother is an Alien. Dan was one of the original members of Saturday Night Live and won an Emmy in 1977.

Dana Barrett (Sigourney Weaver)

Sigourney Weaver is as multi-talented, brave and beautiful as her character, Dana Barrett. Her other films include Working Girl, Half Moon Street, One Woman or Two, Eyewitness, and The Year of Living Dangerously. She has also appeared on and off Broadway in productions ranging from Shakespeare (The Merchant of Venice) to modern drama (Hurlyburly).

Egon Spengler (Harold Ramis)

In real life Harold Ramis is as busy as the super-scientist, Professor Egon Spengler. Repeating the roles of star and co-writer that he had in Ghostbusters, Harold Ramis returns after recent appearances in Baby Boom and Stealing Home. (Strangely enough, these two films were the first ones he just acted in!) Harold also co-wrote National Lampoon's Animal House, Meatballs, and Armed and Dangerous, and co-wrote and starred in Stripes. He co-wrote and directed Caddyshack and Club Paradise, and directed National Lampoon's Vacation. His only problem is finding time to sleep.

Winston Zeddemore (Ernie Hudson)

His movie credits include Leviathan, Wrong Guys, Collision Course, Weeds, Spacehunter: Adventures in the Forbidden Zone, Penitentiary II, Two of a Kind, Going Berserk, The Jazz Singer and The Main Event. An Emmy Award winning writer, Rick Moranis also co-directed and co-wrote the motion picture Strange Brew. His impressive acting credits include: Streets of Fire, The Breakfast Club, Club Paradise, Brewster's Millions and Little Shop of Horrors, just to name a few.

In Ghostbusters II, many expert special effects people planned, designed and created incredibly realistic illusions.

The Scoleri Brothers ghosts come alive to wreak havoc once again and avenge themselves.

The Ghostbusters at the helm of the Statue of Liberty, fabricated on a soundstage to look like the real thing.

And, finally, three views of Slimer in action, including the ol' spud indulging in his favorite activity...eating!
